Elementary S.T.E.M. Class

Adna Elementary students are excited to learn new things in STEM class. Every third week students get to learn about robotics, programming, circuits and even 3-D printing and CAD! It is a great opportunity to experience new things (pictures are from the 3rd grade 3-D printing).

Adna School District, District/School Profile

The mission - The Adna School District, a vital part of the community since 1871, is to ensure that students learn those skills necessary to become productive, caring and thinking individuals who strive to do their best. Our goal is to accomplish this in a safe, caring environment by working in cooperation with parents and the community and by providing appropriate curriculum, effective instruction and the necessary resources.

Our Learning Improvement Goals - Continue to build on communications, meeting the needs of diverse learners, increase reading, writing and math scores, student responsibility and accountability and to enhance professional development.

Family and Consumer Science is doing some exciting projects this year. Students spent the first semester learning sewing basics. They started with simple stitches and then moved on to creating a number of projects. To date, they have sewn Christmas Ornaments, Stockings, Cell Phone Cases and Hats. Most importantly, students have begun repairing their own clothing using the techniques they have learned during this first semester. Home Ec students have also been working on quilts to sell for the Adna Senior Auction. Each class has participated in this process and we are counting on these quilts to bring some real excitement to this year’s auction. Students have also pitched in and repaired some of the clothes that were donated through the Adna Clothing Drive, led by Mackale Larson.

Students will now be accessing the sewing machines in order to take on some more challenging projects: Table Settings and Aprons. This is such an exciting time for these students. Their growth through learning a new and extremely practical skill is building genuine confidence and a sense of self-reliance which will serve them in the years to come. Keep your eyes on these kids and their projects. They are making a difference here at Adna. Photographed: Keaton Dowell works on a beautiful hat for Christmas and Lane Baker is very serious about his cell phone case project.

Though this year is very different, students within the Agriculture Education Program are still participating in several hands-on activities, projects, and learning experiences. Our metal shop students still have the opportunity to safely learn new skills within the trade industry as well as earning college credit for their course work. The other classes are performing labs, research, and dissections as well. The Jr. High Intro to Ag. class just finished up learning about the anatomy and structure of an egg. The Animal Science class is learning about animal facilities, drafting and math, and constructing their own 3-D animal housing facilities. Our Ag. Leadership class is preparing a service project for the community and is ready to welcome two FFA State Officers who will be coming into the classroom next week to conduct workshops and activities with both groups of students.
